The History of Veterans Day

On November 11, 1918, at the eleventh hour, an armistice between the Allied nations and Germany took effect, ending the fighting in World War I. To commemorate the end of the “war to end all wars,” President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed that November 11 would be celebrated as Armistice Day.

Decades later, after World War II ended, Americans began a tradition of celebrating all military veterans on Armistice Day. And in 1954, Congress formalized this tradition by renaming the observance Veterans Day, in honor of the contributions and sacrifices of military members throughout America’s history.

A Message From Our President and CEO, Craig Levra

Veterans Day is a time to express gratitude and appreciation for those who have served our country in the military. At PRIDE Industries, veterans are an important part of who we are, and comprise more than 9% of our 3,744 employees. In addition, our employee ranks are filled with military spouses and close relatives of active service members.

We are proud to welcome and support military veterans as they transition to meaningful civilian careers. This commitment recently earned PRIDE Industries recognition as a 2026 Military Friendly® Employer, a designation that reflects the services and programs we offer to benefit military veterans, as well as spouses of veterans and soon-to-be-separated military personnel.

Our annual Veterans Salute publication recognizes the many PRIDE Industries employees who have served our country. These outstanding employees have since brought their talents to our company and our customers, which include 22 military bases and several federal agencies. In the pages that follow, you will meet some of these individuals and learn how we advocate for, recruit, support, and promote our veteran employees.

To all of PRIDE Industries' veterans, we thank you, and we salute you.

With deepest appreciation,

250 Years of Service

PRIDE Industries is fortunate to employ many military veterans—men and women who bring to our social enterprise the same qualities that helped them succeed in uniform: leadership, resilience, dedication, adaptability, teamwork, and a deep commitment to mission. Their service did not end when they left the military. It continues in the work they do each day, in the example they set for colleagues, and in the ways they strengthen our company and our communities.

This year, as Americans mark the 250th anniversary of our nation's founding, it is especially fitting to recognize all that service members and veterans have done throughout our history. They have protected this country in moments of peril and, just as importantly, returned to their hometowns to help build the nation they defended. Across generations, American veterans have brought their skills, values, and sense of purpose to farms and factories, classrooms and hospitals, civic organizations and companies like PRIDE Industries.

The story of America is inseparable from the story of those who served. In 1775, before independence had been won, citizen-soldiers answered the call to defend an idea the world had not yet seen fully realized: a republic founded on liberty, self-government, and the rights of its people. Their courage helped transform a declaration into a nation. In the War of 1812, Americans again defended the young republic's sovereignty, strengthening a national identity that was still taking shape.

In the Civil War, service members bore the terrible weight of a nation divided against itself. Their sacrifice helped preserve the Union and move the country closer to the promise of freedom on which it had been founded. In later generations, American service members carried that responsibility beyond the nation's borders. They crossed oceans in World War I, stood against tyranny in World War II, defended allies in Korea, served through the complexity and sacrifice of Vietnam, and undertook missions in the Gulf War, the Balkans, Iraq, Afghanistan, and beyond.

Across every era, military service has required more than physical courage. It has demanded loyalty to others, discipline under pressure, the humility to serve something larger than oneself, and the endurance to carry out difficult responsibilities with honor. Those same qualities have played an important role in life beyond the battlefield. After their service, military veterans return to civilian life with a wealth of experience earned in demanding circumstances. They become mentors, neighbors, volunteers, public servants, entrepreneurs, and leaders. They help families thrive and communities grow.

As the United States marks its 250th anniversary, we honor not only the major battles and historic milestones, but also the individual stories behind them: the people who answered the call, the families who waited, the communities that welcomed veterans home, and the generations who carried forward a tradition of service. Their sacrifice has helped preserve the freedoms that Americans are privileged to enjoy today. And their example reminds us that service is more than a chapter in history—it is a living commitment to the nation and to one another.

Valentino Corbett

RECIPIENT, HONOR ROLL FOR VETERANS AWARD

After serving his country for more than 20 years in the U.S. Army, Valentino Corbett joined PRIDE Industries in 2013. Today, his skills as a master locksmith make him an essential member of our facilities management team at Fort Rucker. Beyond his extensive expertise, Valentino is known for exemplifying PRIDE Industries' core values of integrity, teamwork, tenacity, and innovation. Recently, Valentino's many accomplishments—from both his military and civilian careers—were recognized by SourceAmerica® when the organization named him a recipient of the Honor Roll for Veterans Award. The story that follows originally appeared on the SourceAmerica website and is reprinted here with SourceAmerica's permission.

Valentino Corbett has built a reputation at PRIDE Industries for technical excellence, leadership, and dedication that inspires those around him. As a locksmith, he manages the security of hundreds of buildings, maintaining thousands of locks while handling rekeying, vault access, and complex access issues. While managing multiple service-related disabilities and a recent hip replacement, Corbett continues to perform at an exceptional level, earning respect from colleagues and supervisors alike. His professionalism, reliability, and quiet strength make him a cornerstone of his team.

Corbett's career has advanced rapidly, earning his Alabama State Locksmith License and completing GSA Authorized Safe and Vault Tech training, critical credentials that allowed the organization to retain a key contract requirement in-house. He was recognized as Employee of the Quarter in 2023 for his technical skill, positive attitude, and willingness to mentor others. He guides an apprentice in the locksmithing trade, fostering collaboration and creating opportunities for professional growth among his coworkers.

Corbett's military service as a U.S. Army First Sergeant instilled discipline, resilience, and leadership that continue to shape his success. Leading diverse teams in complex, high-pressure situations taught him to communicate clearly, problem-solve effectively, and remain calm under pressure, the kinds of skills he applies daily in his role. As Don Nelson, PRIDE Industries' Senior Vice President of Operations, says, "Valentino's leadership is not just effective—it's transformative, enriching the workplace and inspiring those around him."

His passion goes far beyond his professional achievements as well; Corbett is deeply committed to his community. Through his Masonic Lodge and Omega Psi Phi fraternity, he organizes initiatives such as Toys for Tots drives, bike giveaways, highway cleanups, charity walks, and meals for first responders. His volunteerism mirrors his approach to work: dependable, thoughtful, and focused on lifting others.

Valentino Corbett exemplifies the spirit of the AbilityOne® Program through his resilience, skill, and leadership. He consistently exceeds expectations, uplifts those around him, and creates lasting impact both in the workplace and in the community.

SourceAmerica

A WINNING PARTNERSHIP

SourceAmerica is a nonprofit agency that plays a crucial role in administering the AbilityOne® Program, a federal initiative that promotes the hiring of people with disabilities on government projects. Created in 1971, the AbilityOne Program supports jobs for approximately 40,000 people with disabilities every year.

At PRIDE Industries, we are proud to be part of that story. We first partnered with SourceAmerica in 1987, when we were granted an AbilityOne contract to sort nuts, bolts, and scrap metal for the military at McClellan Air Force Base. Today, the people we hire through AbilityOne contracts perform crucial facilities maintenance and other work at military installations and government institutions throughout the country—including Fort Bliss, LA AFB, Fort Campbell, the General Services Administration, and many other federal entities.

Together, PRIDE Industries and SourceAmerica show what is possible when people with disabilities—including service-disabled veterans—are given the opportunity to use their skills. Their success strengthens not only their own lives and careers, but also the employers and communities that benefit from an inclusive, resilient workforce.

MILITARY VETERAN JACK JACKMAN RETIRES

Jack Jackman, a retired U.S. Air Force lieutenant colonel, is leaving PRIDE Industries after six years leading the Contracts Department.

Reflecting on his time here, Jack said, "I am deeply grateful for the opportunity to have led the Contracts Department at PRIDE Industries over the past six years. It has been a privilege to work alongside such dedicated and talented colleagues in support of PRIDE Industries' mission and growth. As I retire, I leave with great pride in what we have accomplished together and wish the company continued success and even greater achievements in the years ahead."

Jack will be missed by his many colleagues. Don Nelson, Senior Vice President of Operations, had this to say about Jack: "It has been a pleasure to work with Jack over the past six years. During his time with PRIDE Industries, Jack has been a steady leader, a trusted advisor, and a true teammate whose dedication to our mission has helped shape the success of countless contracts and partnerships. On a personal note, one of the things I appreciate most about Jack is his ability to tackle complex issues and present all the facts. No matter how challenging the situation, his thoughtful perspective, practical solutions, and sense of humor help keep everyone focused on the goal. Thank you, Jack, for six outstanding years of leadership, partnership, and friendship. Congratulations on this milestone!"

National Hire a Veteran Day at PRIDE Industries

In July, PRIDE Industries proudly celebrated National Hire a Veteran Day by hosting our fourth annual hiring event for military veterans.

To expand participation and increase accessibility, this year's event was held virtually, connecting job seekers with career opportunities from across the country. Thanks to the success of our annual Hire a Veteran Day events, veteran recruitment at PRIDE Industries continues to grow, and has so far resulted in more than 20 veteran hires from these events alone.

Our veteran hiring events are part of a dedicated effort to recruit and support military veterans. At PRIDE Industries, we're proud to have hundreds of veterans serving throughout the company. In our last fiscal year, 13% of all our new hires were military veterans—more than double the benchmark for federal contractors.

The success of this year's hiring event reflects PRIDE Industries' longstanding commitment to supporting veterans on their journey to meaningful employment, growth, and purpose after military service.

Veterans Employee Resource Group

PRIDE Industries' Veterans Employee Resource Group (ERG) brings together employees who share a commitment to honoring and supporting those who have served. Throughout the year, the group creates opportunities for connection, education, recognition, and community service—helping veterans and military-connected employees feel seen, valued, and supported.

One such opportunity is Voices of Valor, an initiative that invites military veterans to share their thoughts and personal stories of service, transition, and continued purpose. By creating space for these stories, the Veterans ERG helps build understanding across the organization and reminds employees of the many ways that military experience strengthens our workforce. The ERG also hosts forums featuring veteran-focused speakers and topics such as military history, veteran hiring, and resources for military-connected employees.

Service remains central to the group's work. Members support organizations and initiatives such as Operation Homefront, Toys for Tots, Wreaths Across America, veterans' cemetery cleanups, hospital card-writing campaigns, and holiday card drives for military families. Through these efforts, the Veterans ERG helps extend PRIDE Industries' mission of inclusion, opportunity, and service to the military veteran community.

2026 TOP MILITARY SPOUSE EMPLOYER

PRIDE Industries recognizes the vital role military spouses play in supporting service members, families, and communities. That is why we are proud to support military spouse employment—and honored to be named a 2026 Top Military Spouse Employer by U.S. Veterans Magazine.

Through flexible employment opportunities, skills-based hiring, remote and location-flexible roles, training, mentoring, and career development support, we help military spouses build meaningful careers while navigating the demands of military life.

"Organizations that invest in military spouses are investing in an incredibly skilled and determined workforce," said Mona Lisa Faris, President and Publisher at U.S. Veterans Magazine. "PRIDE Industries' commitment to flexibility, career development, and support for military families reflects the kind of leadership we are proud to highlight through our 2026 Top Military Spouse Employer recognition."

REMEMBER AND HONOR

Edward 'Ed' Fleming Jr.

1962 – 2025 | U.S. AIR FORCE VETERAN

Edward 'Ed' Fleming Jr. | 1962–2025

Edward Oliver Fleming Jr., a U.S. Air Force veteran and longtime PRIDE Industries leader, passed away unexpectedly on December 31, 2025. He leaves behind a legacy of service, leadership, and friendship that touched countless lives throughout his military and civilian careers.

Born on June 21, 1962, in Fort Campbell, Kentucky, Ed dedicated the first chapter of his professional life to serving his country. He enlisted in the United States Air Force in 1980 and served as an Air Crew Rescue Systems Specialist, attaining the rank of Staff Sergeant. During his military career, he participated in Operations Urgent Fury, Big Pine I and II, Just Cause, Desert Shield, and Desert Storm. After

"I have never met someone I didn't eventually make friends with."

—EDWARD OLIVER FLEMING JR.

12 years of active-duty service, Ed continued serving in the U.S. Air Force Reserves until 1995.

The military not only provided Ed with technical expertise and operational experience, but also shaped the leadership philosophy that would guide him throughout the rest of his life. Accountability, teamwork, adaptability, and service to others were hallmarks of both his military and civilian careers.

Following his military service, Ed launched his own business, Theater Maintenance and Services, before continuing into a variety of management and leadership positions. In 2011, he joined PRIDE Industries as an Integrated Facilities Services Project Supervisor at Sacramento International Airport.

Over the next 14 years, Ed's career reflected a steady progression of growth, responsibility, and leadership. Beginning as a supervisor, he went on to serve as Area Supervisor, Operations Support Manager, Site Operations Manager, Special Project Manager, Regional Manager, and ultimately Regional Operations Director. Throughout his tenure, Ed supported airport operations, correctional facilities, commercial accounts, and special projects across California and beyond.

Those who worked with Ed often pointed to his military experience as a foundation for his success. The discipline and leadership skills he developed in the Air Force translated naturally into facility operations, project management, and team leadership. Colleagues relied on him to step into challenging assignments, manage complex transitions, and help teams navigate difficult situations.

Dana Almora, Director of Culture, first met Ed in 2012, during a PRIDE Industries orientation for new managers.

“Ed embodied service, integrity, and leadership,” she said. “He led by example, working alongside his team, advocating for employees, and building trust through genuine relationships. To Ed, leadership was never about a title. It was about people.”

As Ed’s responsibilities increased, so did his influence. He became known as a leader who willingly shared knowledge, mentored employees, and encouraged others to develop their skills. His ability to build strong relationships was evident wherever he worked. Whether training employees, supporting customers, testing flooring solutions, or coordinating operational projects, Ed found fulfillment in helping others succeed.

“Ed had a remarkable ability to truly see and acknowledge others,” said Mary Flores, Vice President of Custodial and Environmental Services. “He noticed strengths in people and made sure to let them know, fostering a sense of appreciation and belonging.”

Don Nelson, Senior Vice President of Operations, remembered Ed as someone who approached every challenge with humility and professionalism.

“Ed was a genuine leader who cared deeply about his colleagues and customers, leading with integrity, care, and excellence,” Don said. “No challenge placed before Ed went unresolved. He handled every situation humbly, with grace, and with consideration for all involved.”

Outside of work, Ed enjoyed gathering family and friends together to share good food and good conversation. He was known as someone who could be relied on, even by complete strangers. Years ago, Ed was shopping for groceries when a man collapsed in front of him and stopped breathing. Ed acted quickly, applying the CPR skills he’d learned from his safety training to sustain the man’s breathing until paramedics arrived. To those who knew Ed, his quick thinking and selfless behavior were no surprise.

Ed’s journey from Air Force Staff Sergeant to Regional Operations Director reflects a lifetime of service, growth, and leadership. More importantly, it reflects a commitment to people—his family, his coworkers, his teams, and everyone fortunate enough to have known him. Though his passing leaves a tremendous void, the example he set will continue to inspire others for years to come.

PRIDE Industries Honors All Who Have Served

American military veterans employed at PRIDE Industries are encouraged to self-identify so that we are better able to serve their needs and monitor our progress in veteran recruitment. This also lets us thank them for their service and the sacrifices they have made for our nation.

However, not all of our military veteran employees wish to be recognized, and for those that do, the information they share about their service varies. Their reasons are their own and are respected. Whether listed on these pages, or absent by choice, their contributions are equally appreciated. We thank them all!
